Beautiful Freaks on show

From next month, photographer Ralf Obergfell exhibits Beautiful Freaks, an eye-popping array of clubland's most flamboyantly dressed characters and scene-makers, captured at renowned night spots including Gutter Slut, Trailer Trash and Horse Meat Disco's NYC Downlow at Glastonbury. As part of Photomonth 09, Britain's largest photography festival, Obergfell's images will be shown in all their garish splendour perched above set designer Tony Hornecker's rusty-steel sculptures, in the ever-popular Dalston Superstore venue.

Beautiful Freaks opens on September 25, until November 08; 12 noon to 2 am daily. Dalston Superstore, 117 Kingsland High Street, London, E8; Tel 020 7254 2273, www.ralfobergfell.com

A Suit That Fits

If your business attire is no longer booming or your wedding wardrobe's frazzled, help could be at hand thanks to a tailor that offers Savile Row-quality clobber at high-street prices. A Suit That Fits is the brainchild of old school pals Warren Bennett and David Hathiramani, who decided to launch a men's fashion label after the former spent 2005 teaching English in Nepal. 'I had some suits made there and when I would come home, everyone would marvel at the quality,' recalls Bennett, who then started to take orders on behalf of friends. Soon, the seeds of a simple yet brilliant business idea were sewn: measure people in Britain, have the suits made in Nepal and ship them back. The pair have never looked back; in two years, A Suit That Fits has gone from one tiny office in the City to a nationwide network with a catwalk show under its belt. The company has hundreds of fabrics and linings to choose from on its website and personalised details can include everything from colour-detailed stitching to hand-sewn lapels. Suits take around six weeks to complete, alterations can be done in Britain and cheaper options are available if you self-measure according to their on-site instructions. Prices from £150, www.asuitthatisfits.com James Ellis
